Dr. Murthy, has had extensive experience with the recruitment and training of medical graduate students. He has taught medicine in the under graduate and post graduate programme,

He supports medical students in their professional development, specialty selection, and residency application. His fifteen year tenure as Dean/Principal provides him with broad perspective on the medical training pathway.

Dr. Murthy's major educational focus has been on professional development in both student and resident medical trainees. Examples of initiatives he has led include novel programming to prepare students for their clinical clerkships, critical event counseling to harness transformative learning opportunities, aggressive longitudinal counseling to promote resident scholarship, and the creation of a formal physician residency training pathway. Other work has focused on the centralization and development of new administrative resources to enhance residency and fellowship training in the age of the Accreditation Committee of Graduate Medical Education's.

An important feature of Dr. Murthy's efforts to promote professional development in both residents and students is an emphasis on social justice. As a Dean he enhanced diversity in the residency programme through the implementation of a visiting clerkship program and the development of a minority resident organization. He has enhanced quality and ethical standards of practice at the Sri Siddhartha Medical College, at which over ninety percent of SSAHE students serve before graduation.

Dr. Murthy, works closely with the admission team and helps to oversee all aspects of the admission process at SSAHE, and his role in admissions includes the recruitment and support of prospective students throughout the SSAHE application process, as well as working with faculty and students of the Admissions Committee in forming each medical college class.

Dr. Murthy, directs the Wellness Programs, oversees the Free Clinic experiences for students and helps to direct career advising and mentoring programs. His work encourages students to reflect on their journey through medical training and empowers students to care for themselves in order to serve their patients and communities.
